

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased by 1.2 billion, from 1.1 billion in 1980 to 2.3 billion in 1999. The number of children under 15 years of age in the world is projected to increase to 3.1 billion by 2015, with the largest increases occurring in the developing world (United Nations, 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of children in the world, and the United Nations has established the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) to protect the rights of children. The CRC is a legally binding treaty that sets out the rights of children, and it has been ratified by 113 countries. The CRC is a landmark document in the history of children's rights, and it has led to the development of many national laws and policies to protect children's rights.

The CRC is a comprehensive document that covers a wide range of issues, including the right to life, the right to health, the right to education, the right to play, and the right to be heard.
